Aaron Erter, CEO of James Hardie said, "Our first quarter results are expected to exceed our prior guidance, primarily as a result of better-than-expected sales in Siding & Trim. Siding & Trim net sales reflected strong sell-through and underlying demand for our products. Our performance in Deck, Rail & Accessories was driven by channel inventory normalization and sell-through that improved throughout the quarter."

“We are pleased with our fiscal first quarter preliminary results. We believe our performance reflects our team’s execution and growth above market, rather than a meaningful improvement in the overall U.S. housing market. That said, we are encouraged by the positive traction from our initiatives to grow our fiber cement business, continued conversion in decking and the positive contribution from sales and cost synergies. We will provide an update on our full year guidance with our first quarter earnings call.”
