- HEALEY platform dynamics and rationale for expansion
- Regimen I Timeline
- Financial considerations

Key Takeaways

Neurizon announced an expansion to the size of Regimen I intended to support a larger and more informative dataset, with accelerated time to topline readout and no change in funding requirements.

Increase in Neurizon's Regimen I sample size driven by the enrolment rate exceeding original expectations and the absence of a concurrent regimen during the expected recruitment period.

Revised design preserves the original statistical assumptions underpinning the primary endpoint analysis and supports more robust subgroup and biomarker analysis.

Based on current enrolment momentum, Neurizon anticipates last participant dosing in Q2 CY2027 with topline results expected in early Q3 CY2027, ahead of previous expectations.

Funding requirements remain unchanged. A modest increase anticipated in total study completion costs to be offset by Philanthropic funding support from the Sean M. Healey & AMG Center for ALS.

Larger and more informative dataset generated under the same inclusion criteria strengthens future regulatory discussions, partnering opportunities and commercial positioning.

Expansion of Regimen I sample from 160 to 240 participants

Expansion Driven by:

- Enrolment rates exceeding original expectations
- Rapid U.S. site activation and strong operational execution across the Sean M. Healey & AMG Center for ALS network
- Absence of a start of a concurrent regimen during the expected recruitment window
- Opportunity to generate a larger and more informative dataset under the same inclusion criteria
- Potential to strengthen future regulatory, partnering, and commercial positioning
- Ability to capitalise on current recruitment momentum while maintaining trial continuity and efficiency

Original Design:

- n=160 participants
- 3:1 Randomisation
- 120 Active
- 40 Placebo

Expanded Design:

- n=240 participants
- 3:1 Randomisation
- 180 Active
- 60 Placebo

Why Expansion to 240 Matters?

Stronger Dataset

- Maintains statistical power aligned with the original assumptions
- Allows subgroups of lower prevalence to be studied
- Supports additional biomarker and translational insights relevant to ALS and broader neurodegenerative diseases

Improved Regulatory Credibility

- Clinically meaningful benefit with ability to detect effect size maintained
- Removes reliance on placebo data from concurrent regimens
- Strengthens interpretability of the primary endpoint analysis
- Supports future expedited regulatory pathway discussions, including Fast Track Designation, Breakthrough Designation, Priority Review and Accelerated Approval, where appropriate

Improves Commercial Positioning

- Stronger Evidence: Generates a larger, more informative dataset to support future regulatory interactions
- Faster Execution: Accelerates time-to-topline by delivering a fully powered dataset earlier through rapid enrolment rate
- Commercial Advantage: Optimises partnering and broader strategic positioning for NUZ-001

'Regimen-I' Trial execution timelines exceed previous projections

Financial Considerations

Accelerated time to topline readout with no change in funding requirements

Cost Management & Accelerated Trial Timeline

Focused cost management and fast enrolment support no change to expected costs to topline read out

Philanthropic Contribution from HEALEY

Additional cost being materially offset by meaningful contribution of philanthropic funds from the Sean M. Healey & AMG Center for ALS

R&D Tax Incentive

Modest increase in cost of full trial to be further offset by Australian Federal Government's R&D Tax Incentive cash rebate

Accelerating ALS research through collaboration and cost efficiency
